

Working and learning in modern workshops, special vocational school and rehearsing the correct conduct.

Vocational Training in Germany is based on a dual system. That means it consists of two parts: the classroom lessons in the vocational school and the work in a workshop or a company.

The BBW has its own vocational school (Johannes-Landenberger-Schule) in which the students are taught. If they don't have any lessons at vocational school, the trainees work in the workshops of the institutions or in companies and factories in the vicinity. The training is very close to practice - in each workshop customer orders are processed or directly worked on with customers.

The young people receive additional support from social pedagogues, psychologists and a doctor. If needed, the motor skills are promoted and additional tuition lessons are offered.

In Waiblingen there are also places to live in differing forms of residence (boarding school).

Many job offers through regional locations in the metropolitan area of Stuttgart and Ostalb-kreis

Thanks to the four locations in Waiblingen (BBW and Regionales Bildungszentrum RBZ), in Esslingen (Berufliches Ausbildungszentrum BAZ), in Aalen and Schwäbisch Gmünd (Berufsausbildungswerk BAW) many young people can receive a training in the surroundings of their place of residence. Everyone can profit from the know-how and the diverse equipment of a large institution.

The Berufsbildungswerk Waiblingen (BBW) gGmbH is a vocational training center with locations in Waiblingen, Esslingen, Aalen and Schwäbisch Gmünd. In all 4 centers, financed by the German employment agency, disadvantaged young people with learning difficulties get a special vocational training or preparation. The goal is that every trainee receives a job later on and finds his place in working and daily life. In the Berufsbildungswerk Waiblingen gGmbH more than 1000 young people are being trained and educated in more than 30 different trades. In the past years, an average of respectively 80% of the apprentices subsequently received a job.

Quality and further development

Experienced and qualified personal with special concepts for young people who need special help work in all locations of the gGmbH. The BBW participates in differing research projects. The results flow into the promotion of the youths. This is the case for example with youth who suffer from ADD, epilepsy or psychological damage.
